Raksha Swayadha, a Sikh poet and author of the Sutra of the Mahabhur (The True Religion), writes: We would also like to share with you one of our prayers - the great Sikh prayer of gratitude & gratitude for what we do in the world. This great prayer, which we recite daily to ourselves, and which we call 'Bhava Bhaak' or 'Bhava Bhoak', can be likened to a mantra or a chant of gratitude for your love, for your kind word to us in the form of a meal. We are pleased to say that Bhava Bhava Bhava Bhoodas) is one of the Sikh traditions that has been honored on the Day of Holy Quran in our village. It is a great tradition which is spread by our community to all corners of the world, to bring blessings to those who have not heard about our religion, but to bring blessings to those who are. It has been blessed to have been transmitted to us by the Sikh community of India from the earliest stages of our history, especially in the Vedas and Shastras. This tradition is in part founded in our own history. This 'Bhava Bhoodas' also means the most basic gift that we as Sikhs have, and also a gift, of which the heart and the mind are only a part. The reason why we have kept this tradition very pure in Sikhims, the Sikhs of India, is because we would have been very unhappy if we were to have introduced other things by which to give our gifts. However, we are not so simple as we were back in the days of our country and before the advent of Islam. We have taken very good care of our traditions. Therefore, when it comes to a special occasion like the Holy month of Ramadan, when this tradition is most wanted, we have used that tradition to give a gift which we cannot pass on – and even if we knew it was possible we would not do it. Thus we did not use any other tradition. As an example, the Sikhs of Nepal are fond of giving the gift of kites, and it is not considered the most precious of all gifts, we only add it to our Bhoodas. On account of this, in recent years when the Sikhs of Nepal have asked some things to do in the name of the community, they have found that they could not have made this gift as 'Gift of.0 mb.
